

Old is New Again

Eco-friendly reclaimed wood makes a fresh design statement.

WHETHER YOU THRILL to the idea of keeping perfectly good wood out of the landfill or you love the unique grain of antique timbers, there are endless applications for using reclaimed wood at home—and more companies than ever available to fulfill your wishes. Take a plank with its own history, say, siding a barn or lining a wine vat, and add your own story in the years to come.

This chef's paradise features a reclaimed Jarrah countertop and chop block plus custom salvaged beech cabinetry. Pioneer Millworks reclaims wood from barns, industrial buildings facing demolition and other sources, and estimates it has kept 20 million board feet out of landfills. pioniermillworks.com, 800-951-9663

Eye-Catching Floors

Old wood lends an historical footnote to your home that is reflected in each plank sold by Elmwood Reclaimed Timber of Smithville, Missouri. Flooring, beams and other options are available. elmwoodreclaimedtimber.com, 800-705-0705

Rustic Mantels

Working closely with homeowners, Mendota Mantels in St. Paul, Minnesota, designs and handcrafts mostly custom applications. The red pine piece above was originally harvested c. 1873! mendotamantels.com, 651-271-7544

Fantastic Furnishings

Transforming reclaimed wood from New England into furniture art is the specialty of Staples Cabinet Makers. The owners, Stephen and Christine Staples, rely on their years of experience restoring fine antiques. Dream up a custom order or browse finished pieces for sale. staplescabinetmakers.com, 508-695-1155

Decorative Frames

Custom reclaimed wood frames from Green House Framing will make your art even more distinctive. Purchases shipped in reclaimed boxes. recycledframes.com, 503-777-8420